

BHAGWAN SHREE RAJNEESH

The Greatest Challenge:

THE GOLDEN FUTURE

century,” said Robert Rimmer, another famous American writer.

Kazuyoshi Kino, professor of Buddhist studies in Japan, has called Bhagwan “the rarest and most talented religionist to appear in this century.”

With over 500 published books to his credit in English and Hindi – many translated into over 30 other languages – Bhagwan is the most prolific author in history. In the last year alone he has added fifty new titles to this already extraordinary output.

Bhagwan has repeatedly said that the world faces two alternatives: global suicide or meditation.

The abhorrent past we call “history”, he says, is the creation of priests and politicians, “the mafia of the soul.” If these people are followed, they will lead the planet to utter ruin. They are the problem, not part of the solution.

Bhagwan says the meditative man is the solution. Totally discontinuous with the past, he will live his life joyously, consciously and creatively. Together with a science freed for the first time from the shackles of organizations interested only in power and destruction, he will turn the future golden and the earth into a paradise.

About his work, Bhagwan has said: “I am the death of the old man, and the birth of the New Man.”

A painting of a large, vibrant red flower, possibly a geranium, standing out prominently in a dark, dense thicket of vines and leaves. The background is a mix of dark greens, browns, and hints of yellow and orange, suggesting a sun-dappled forest or garden. The overall mood is mysterious and somewhat somber, with the bright red flower acting as a focal point of hope or rebellion.
